What is recreational therapy?

Recreational therapy is a treatment service designed to restore, remediate and rehabilitate a person’s level of functioning and independence in life activities, to promote health and wellness, as well as reduce or eliminate the activity limitations and restrictions to participation in life situations caused by an illness or disabling condition.

There is a growing body of research supporting evidence-based practice. Some of the more common benefits of recreational therapy are:

Physical Benefits
Pain reduction; improvement in muscular strength, flexibility and balance; improved gross and fine motor skills; decreased blood pressure

Cognitive Benefits
Increased attention span; enhanced memory; reduced confusion; enhanced executive functioning; increased awareness and alertness

Psycho-Social Benefits
Improved stress management; enhanced body image and attitude toward disability; improved social and communication skills; decreased feelings of loneliness

Emotional Benefits
Reduced fear, anxiety, and depression; enhanced coping skills

Employment of recreational therapists is projected to grow 7 percent from 2018 to 2028, faster than the average for all occupations.

As the large baby-boom generation ages, they will need recreational therapists to help treat age-related injuries and illnesses and to help them maintain a healthy, active lifestyle.”

The CTRS® credential is the only international certification designed to protect the consumer of recreational therapy services. The CTRS® credential has been developed and accredited based on accepted standards for certifying agencies and the following established criteria:

- NCTRC certification standards are based on the knowledge and skills necessary for practice within a wide range of service sectors, as verified by national job analysis research.
- Each CTRS® has met rigorous professional eligibility requirements and has passed a national certification exam which has established norms for both validity and reliability.
- Each CTRS® completes a recertification program designed to ensure continued competence in order to maintain the credential.
- Each CTRS® must comply with NCTRC’s professional practice and disciplinary requirements. NCTRC serves as a clearinghouse for addressing disciplinary issues within the profession of therapeutic recreation.

For more information about the CTRS® credential please visit nctrc.org

Why should you hire a CTRS®?

- As an employer within the healthcare arena, you want to hire the most qualified recreational therapy professional available.
- The CTRS® credential is the oldest and most well-recognized credential within the field.
- Certification by NCTRC demonstrates to the public and employers that the recreational therapist has a minimum of a bachelor’s degree, has passed the national certification exam and met the requirements for training, skills and knowledge recognized as essential for recreational therapy practice.
- In healthcare, community, residential and school settings where professional credentials and training are indicators of quality, the CTRS® designation is recognized as the benchmark of quality and credentialing within recreational therapy, providing additional value-added services that include:
  - Training and demonstrated abilities in core therapy skills including assessment, planning, implementation, evaluation and documentation
  - Extensive knowledge and skill-based training to enhance quality of life for persons served
  - Multi-functional and diversified skill base to reach a wider spectrum of consumers
  - Training in group-oriented processes to enhance cost effectiveness and efficiencies in service delivery
  - Assurance that staff qualifications are in compliance with accreditation standards, health districts and legislative requirements

About NCTRC: Dedicated to Professional Excellence

Established in 1981, the National Council for Therapeutic Recreation Certification (NCTRC) is a non-profit, international organization dedicated to professional excellence for the protection of consumers through the certification of recreational therapists.

Professional recognition as a CTRS® is granted by NCTRC to individuals who apply and meet established standards for certification, including education, experience, successful completion of the NCTRC exam and continuing professional development.

In addition, NCTRC provides credential verification services to employers and healthcare agencies. Use of these services is strongly encouraged by NCTRC to monitor personnel adherence to the standards of the Certified Therapeutic Recreation Specialist.

NCTRC is a charter member organization of the Institute for Credentialing Excellence (ICE). NCTRC is accredited by the National Commission for Certifying Agencies (NCCA).
